

Human Rights

The Vancouver Island School of Art states unequivocally that all members of our community are expected to treat one another with respect and with equality, without regard to one's race, colour, sex, sexual orientation, marital status, age, ethnic or national origin, religion or creed, or physical or mental disability. The policy touches all of us and calls upon us to be fair in all settings, academic and non-academic.

The School will not tolerate discrimination. If substantiated, an allegation of discrimination may lead to disciplinary action from the School.
